

Sewanee's 13,000-acre domain is an important bat habitat for species that are in decline due to White Nose Syndrome. The Office of Domain Management needs a way to organize, analyze, and visualize years of bat recordings to understand which places on the Domain should be prioritized for bat conservation.